Fund Manager Comment

All asset classes in November were affected by the US election results that had a sweeping victory for Trump and his republican party. During the month, long-term rates moved higher, with proposed new Tariff policies expected to be inflationary in general, along with excess treasury supply that may come through if there is to be a fiscal expansion from now on. However, we had a 25 bps Fed rate cut in November, but post-election, the path to reductions appears to have softened somewhat.

During the month, the US 10-year decreased from 4.28% to 4.16%. However, it moved as high as 4.44% during the month soon after Trump's election win. The Fed rate cut resulted from the disinflation path and solid employment data supporting the argument for a neutral policy rate level. As of November end, the probability of a further rate cut on December 24 remained balanced while the number of rate cuts for 2025 was reduced to 3. The overall curve from 2Y to 30Y flattened by about 15-25 bps during the month. However, many expect gradual re-steepening of the curve soon.

As explained earlier, many variables are in play, as the US budget deficit is expected to widen with the Trump administration in power and a possible reversal in the inflation trend. Therefore, there is a remote possibility of a rate hike and a further elevation of the yield curve from current levels that may lead to a bear steepening. During the month, Brent ended marginally lower at c. USD 72.94 from c. USD 73.16, with the weight of expected lower global demand pulling lower more than the impact created by the geopolitical tensions. The regional IG and HY space remain favorable to their global counterparts and will continue attracting flows from yield-seeking investors.

QNB MENA Debt Fund, after being launched in 2017, has paid 15 coupons. We remain focused on taking advantage of the opportunistic trades apparent in the market. The fund manager has gradually increased the fund's duration to position the fund to an eventual steeper yield curve. Assets of the Fund are satisfactorily deployed as per the investment guidelines and also in line with the selected benchmark, which the fund intends to outperform in the longer run.
